

LawMate MCP Connector — User Guide

This guide explains, in plain terms, what the LawMate connector does and how to connect to it. For the full product manual, see the LawMate user manual.

What this connector does

The connector gives your AI assistant (Claude, Copilot, Gemini, etc.) access to LawMate's legal research engine — the same one behind the Legal Chat in the LawMate web app — so you can ask legal questions without leaving your assistant. It answers questions where the answer is expected to be found in the law: case law, legislation, or official guidance, for Israel or the United States.

How to ask: ask naturally, in a simple, clear, and concise way. There's no need for long background stories — a focused, one-sentence question works best, for example: "Can cameras be installed in the workplace, and if so under what conditions?" This is not a keyword search engine, so phrase it as a real question.

What you get back: the answer first appears in a concise form, based on the relevant sources from legislation, case law, and guidance, following the principles of legal hierarchy. Where relevant, it is organized by source type:

- Case law — relevant judgments, with priority given to higher courts and later rulings, each with a direct link to the ruling.
- Legislation and Guidance — presented the same way, with links to the relevant legal texts.

Each answer includes cited sources and closely related ones. Every link is a real, clickable citation copied from the underlying source — never invented — so you can open the original text and verify it yourself.

LawMate is AI-based at every level. As with the LawMate web app, always verify important answers against the cited sources before relying on them.

Israel or US law?

By default, answers are based on Israeli law. If your question is about US law, just say so (e.g. "under US law...") and the assistant will search the US database instead.

Requirements

- A LawMate account with chat access, to sign in.

LawMate sign-up / login page: <https://law-mate.com/>

How to connect

1. Add the LawMate connector in your AI assistant's settings (using the LawMate connection link/URL provided to you).
2. Click Connect / Authorize when prompted.
3. Log in with your LawMate account.
4. Approve access — that's it, you're connected.

You'll only need to do this once. If you're ever logged out, just repeat these steps to reconnect.

Troubleshooting

Problem	What to do
Login page shows an error, or won't accept your account	Make sure you're using an active LawMate account, then try again. If it still fails, contact LawMate support.
It stops working after a while	Your connection simply expired. Reconnect using the steps above.
Answers are about the wrong country's law	Mention the country in your question (e.g. "under US law") to get the right region.
Links in the answer don't work	Make sure your assistant is set to show formatted text/Markdown.
Nothing happens, or you get a general error	Try again in a few minutes. If it keeps failing, contact LawMate support.
